

David Salter
416-649-1818
dsalter@litigate.com

September 2, 2021

The Length of Civil Trials and Time to Judgment in Canada: A Case for Time-limited Trials

David Salter co-authored the article The Length of Civil Trials and Time to Judgment in Canada: A Case for Time-limited Trials, which was published in The Canadian Bar Review. This article explores both quantitative and normative factors informing the debate over time-limited trials, concluding that Canadian civil justice systems are well-placed to begin implementing discretionary, judge-ordered time-limited trials.

Continue reading:

<https://cbr.cba.org/index.php/cbr/article/view/4696>